

BANK CASHIER A FUGITIVE.

G. E. Breder of Bethlehem, Pa., Short in His Account $18,000.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Feb. 5.—Cyrus E. Breder, cashier of the First National Bank of Bethlehem, is now a fugitive from justice with a shortage in his accounts at the bank of $12,430.86. When the First National Bank was organized, thirty-four years ago, Breder began with it as a clerk. His steadiness and capacity, within fourteen years, he had worked his way up to cashier. For five years after becoming cashier, he appears to have been honest. Then he took a small sum of money, with the probable idea of returning it. He never returned the first money taken, and thus the last offense until it was discovered that $17,000 which he had received from the bank, small sums at a time, until his shorages reached over $12,000.

On last Tuesday night Breder told his wife he had absconded from the bank and was going to New York city to accept a place there. Since then his whereabouts have been unknown. His absence has been looked into by the police, and it only took an account an hour to discover the extent of the absence of the missing Breder.

Breder's bond expired some time ago and he paid off furnishing a new one. It is said, however, that he is still on the bank. But its contents cannot now be learned. Breder was Treasurer of the Bethlehem Building and Loan Association, but whether he is short in its funds is not known.
